"Pamper Others with Love"<sup>66</sup>

Parent-child Handcream DIY Workshop

In the activity, parents and children made hand cream and played games together to take good care of hands, promote parent-child interaction, and enhance the parent-child relationship. The event is a good time for parent-child activities and an excellent opportunity to spread love. Some hand creams made by parents and children will be given to the elderly to bring them a little warmth.

This family activity was very meaningful. What I liked and the most impressive part was making the cream with the children. Kindergarten very sweetly prepared one more hand cream set for us, so we could make hand cream with our families.

I am very glad to have the opportunity to participate in the family activities held by our school. This hand cream production activity made me and Chak Chak very dedicated, relaxed and we enjoyed this happy and meaningful time together.

During the event, what impressed me the most was that the parents and children fully cooperated to complete the task together. Ms. Zhang was patient and gave us clear explanations for the process; there was tacit cooperation between parents and children; Parents and teachers talked and laughed, and the atmosphere was harmonious.

What I liked most is the process of making the hand cream, because I learned to make it step by step, and it was very interesting. The product was completed by us, and it gave us a great sense of accomplishment. Knowing that the hand cream we made is given to some elderly, also gave me a sense of satisfaction to help others.

Through this activity, I realized that children are far better than I imagined. If the children work patiently, they will progress, and with more company, the children will be happier too. Doing some small activities with children will keep the child away from electronic products, and also enhance their hands-on ability, self-confidence and sense of success.

In this DIY hand cream activity, the most impressive moment was the warm-up activity. Compared with the workshops held by other private organizations, where their warm-up activities might be just to sit and answer some questions. In this workshop, the warm-up activities provided an appropriate time for parents and children to walk around. Listening to music, it really made my daughter and me feel relaxed and happy. Then we could concentrate on the next work.

After the event, I asked my daughter, did you like today's workshop? She said yes, especially when there was a teatime session. Like my daughter, I also like to have teatime, because I can chat with other parents, teachers and principals, so as to strengthen the relationship between each other. The most favorite part was making hand cream with my daughter, and to squeeze the handcream into the bottle. In this step, my daughter and I divided the work. She squeezed, and I helped her align the opening of the small bottle. We quickly completed one thing together. The process made my daughter and me interact happy.

Due to the daily work, there is not enough time to sit down and concentrate on doing handicrafts with my daughter without phone calls and other people interrupting. harassment. Through this workshop, I found out that my daughter was able to do many things than I could not imagine, such as mixing the liquid in the cup, helping to pour the material from the package, and even squeezing out the handcream together. Through this activity, I also learned about the relationship between my daughter and her classmates. I was very happy and look forward to participating in similar activities with my daughter in the future.

As Hei Hei and I were not good at artwork, the entire process kept us engaged and it was an enriching experience. Hei Hei and I worked hard throughout, and we completed the task. It was interactive and enhanced our relationship.

I enjoy this kind of family activity. As the finished products will be given to the elderly, it makes the activity more meaningful. It was a special lesson for my son.

The event will be memorable as in addition to participating in the production of hand cream for the elderly, there was also a material pack that could be taken home to experience ourselves and the hand cream could be given to your family. Additionally, the post workshop teatime was delicious.

I am grateful to have had an opportunity to participate in the family workshop held in school with my daughter. The hand cream workshop not only brought me closer to my daughter, but it was an enjoyable time together, and it also allowed my daughter to learn to bless others. It is very meaningful to give hand cream to the elderly.

Parent-child Handcream DIY Workshop

To let the Happy Bee deepen their awareness of caring for the community, the school arranged for the Happy Bee to Ma Hang Estate - Stanley Shek O Neighborhood Elderly Center for visits. Earlier, parents made hand cream with their children through the workshop. In addition to promoting parent-child interaction and enhancing parent-child relationship, the activity can also give children a good opportunity to spread love and care for the elderly. Now let the “Happy Little Bees” represent the garden to send this care to the elderly in the Stanley community.
